
Reviewed by Marcia Fiedler, Stockton University, Galloway NJ, USA

Pam Jennoff, Quill award nominee and bestselling author of The Kommandant’s Wife and The Diplomat’s Wife, brings us a thrilling adventure of Jordan Weiss, an American State Department Intelligence officer who requests a transfer to London to care for her friend Sarah who is terminally ill. Hoping her return to Cambridge will not bring back the memories she has spent ten years running from, she is forced to relive the past as she learns that her boyfriends’ death may not have been an accident. Trying to make new memories Jordan begins to explore her feelings for a coworker whose kiss brings her to knees while falling into the arms of her dead boyfriends’ best friend. Unofficially investigating the death of her first love, Jordan Weiss uncovers the secrets behind his research on WWII and those who will do anything to hide them. This riveting story will have you rethinking coincidence, manipulation, facts, and love. Author, Pam Jennoff, like Jordan, the lead character in Almost Home also attended Cambridge University in the UK and was a former special assistant to the Secretary of the Army and State Department officer. Pam Jennoff earned her JD from the University of Pennsylvania Law School.